The LIGER

The editorial room of the animal kingdom's daily newspaper, "Animal Antics," was in a turmoil. Reporter Rabbit had just brought in an astounding piece of news, and Publisher Parrot was listening to him unbelievably.

"But I tell you, I saw it," said Reporter Rabbit. "A new kind of animal has just appeared in the forest! It's half tiger and half lion, and it calls itself a liger!"

"I don't believe it," screeched Publisher Parrot. "There's no such thing as a liger—but you're a liar!"

"I am not," cried Reporter Rabbit. "If my reporting reputation is at stake, come on out into the forest with me and I'll show you the liger!"

"All right," said Publisher Parrot. "But if you're lying, you'll lose your job! I can't afford to have undependable reporters on my newspaper!"

And so the parrot hopped onto the rabbit's shoulder, and off the rabbit scampered, into the forest. Pretty soon, they came to the cave where Reporter Rabbit said he'd seen the liger. Sure enough, there was an animal sleeping right at the entrance to the cave.

"See?" said Reporter Rabbit, stopping a safe distance away. "There's the liger!"

"But all I see is the head of a lion," snapped Publisher Parrot. "The body is hidden in the shadows of the cave—how do I know it's the body of a tiger?"

"Well, let's sneak around through the other side of the cave where we can see the body," said Reporter Rabbit.

So the two of them cautiously crept around through the back of the cave until they could see the body of the tiger.

"But how do I know it's the same animal?" asked Publisher Parrot. "Now I can't see its head, and maybe it's really a tiger's head—which would make it a whole tiger, not a liger!"

Just then, the animal woke up and stretched, yawning. The head was that of a lion!

"Ohh," screeched Publisher Parrot. "You're right—it has the head of a lion and the body of a tiger! It IS a liger!"

"Shh!" said Reporter Rabbit. "If you make too much noise, it'll notice us—and no one knows whether the liger is dangerous or not!"

But the liger had already heard them, and it whirled around. Frightened, Reporter Rabbit and Publisher Parrot backed up until they were right against the side of the cave, and couldn't escape any further.

When the liger saw how frightened they were of him, he looked sadly at them and a couple of tears rolled down his lion's face. Which he wiped with his tiger's paw. "You're afraid of me also," cried the liger. "Everyone's afraid of me, just because I'm different! I . . . I don't have a single friend!"

As soon as Publisher Parrot saw that the liger was really a friendly animal, he went up to him and said, "Don't cry, liger—we can help you! Reporter Rabbit here will write a story about you—telling how peaceful and mild you are—and I'll print it in my newspaper. By tomorrow, the whole animal kingdom will know that you're friendly—and you'll have a thousand friends!"

With tears of gratitude in his eyes, the liger put them on his back and carried them back to their office, where he was given a job as Linotyper Liger!

GREMLIN the GROUND-HOG

The big convention hall far below the surface of the earth was packed to capacity, for the ground-hogs were holding their big conference of the year.

"Hear ye, hear ye!" called out the grizzled President Ground-Hog, rapping his gavel on the table in front of him. "This convention will now come to order!"

The excited chatter among the ground-hogs was instantly hushed, and everyone concentrated on what the President was saying.

"As you all know, tomorrow is Ground-Hog day, and we're all here to decide on what to do. Are we to run around above ground, or are we to make believe we're scared of our shadows and run back into our burrows? But whatever we decide, we've all got to do the same thing, because those funny two-legged people, called humans, think this day is very important, and they're relying on us!"

A voice from the back of the convention hall piped up: "Well, what do we care whether they rely on us or not? Why should we climb up out of our nice warm burrows just because we're expected to?"

The President angrily put on his spectacles and peered at the speaker, who was still standing. "Oh," he said. "I should've known only you would ask a question like that, Gremlin Ground-Hog! Don't you know that all the farmers and all the weather experts would be thrown into a tizzy if we didn't show up above ground tomorrow? Why, the farmers wouldn't know what to do if they didn't know what the weather would be like—they wouldn't plant any nice things for us to eat when we go above ground this summer!"

"Well, I guess you've got something there," grudgingly admitted Gremlin Ground-Hog. "But why do we all have to decide what to do? Why can't I do something different if I want to?"

"Because if some of us stay above ground, and others decide to go back into their holes, those humans will still be thrown into a tizzy—they won't know whether to expect Spring or a continuation of winter, and the whole population will be in a turmoil! They'll all be so busy arguing about whether the ground-hogs ran back to their holes or not, with each man saying he saw something else, that they'll never get around to doing any planting. And then we'll be as bad off as if we don't show up at all!"

"Well, I don't care," Gremlin Ground-Hog declared sulkily. "Whatever all of you decide, I'm going to do the opposite! I'm going to be different!"

This statement enraged the President so much that he roared to the Sergeant-At-Arms: "Arrest Gremlin Ground-Hog for insubordination!"

Then, after Gremlin had been hauled off to jail, the President called for a vote. "All those in favor of seeing our shadows tomorrow and running back into our holes, say AYE!"

The convention hall echoed with a resounding chorus of AYES!

"The motion is carried unanimously," declared the President. "Anyone caught disobeying the decision of the majority will be thrown in jail with Gremlin Ground-Hog!"

But the next day, when Gremlin's jail-keeper went up to poke his nose above ground and then run back again, Gremlin managed to escape. Hurriedly, he ran up to the surface, where he saw a human peering down, waiting for Gremlin to appear. And when the human stuck his nose down to see what was keeping the ground-hog, Gremlin squirted his water-pistol at him—just to be different! But the man was so angry that he reached down, grabbed Gremlin—and that was the end of Gremlin Ground-Hog! So you see, it doesn't always pay to be different!

The PIED PIPER

Martin Mouse angrily put down the book he was reading.

"That's an insult!" he muttered in fury. "That Pied Piper story humiliates the entire race of mice and rats! The nerve of that author—saying that mice are so dumb that they'd follow a man to their death just because he was blowing on some silly old flute!"

Martin Mouse flung the story book across the room and stalked out of the house. Suddenly, a bright idea hit him! "I'll redeem the good name of all mice—I'll get revenge on all those people who look down on us! I'll be the Pied Piper—and turn the tables on them!"

With that brilliant thought, he gathered around him half a dozen of his best friends and told them his idea. To each of his friends he gave a musical instrument—a flute, a piccolo, an oboe, a French Horn, a bassoon, and a great big tuba. Then, with Martin Mouse leading the way, they all marched down the main street of town, each one blowing mightily and producing a strange, wild music.

The mice calmly walked on, pretending to be unaware of the commotion they were causing, and pretty soon there was a crowd of people following them. Exultantly, Martin Mouse looked back and knew that his plan was working—the mice were the Pied Pipers, and they were making the humans behave as foolishly as the mice in the story book!

On and on the procession wound, with a huge crowd of gaping, wondering people now following. But intent on their music, the mice didn't see that they were heading right for the sea, and when they got to the water's edge, they were forced to halt. Dismayed, Martin Mouse realized that they would end up the same way as the mice in the story book—they would drown in the sea! But as he fearfully looked at the approaching humans who would force them into the ocean, one excited, bright-eyed man stepped forward, holding a paper and pen in his hands.

"What a show!" the man exclaimed. "Just sign this contract here—I'll make you all the richest mice in Micedom! I'll advertise you as the Musical Mice—you'll be the greatest stars in vaudeville!"

And everything that the man said came true, and every day of the week the Musical Mice thanked their band-leader, Martin Mouse, for having been angry at the Pied Piper story in the nursery book!

BLACKHEADS "PET HATE"

Say Men, Girls in Choosing Date

What a "black mark" is the blackhead . . . according to men and girls popular enough to be choosy about dates!

"Nobody's dreamboat!" "Nobody's date bait!" And that's not all that's said of those who are careless about blackheads. But blackheads ARE ugly! Blackheads ARE grimy! And they DON'T look good in close-ups!

So can you blame the fellow who says, "Sure, I meet lots of girls who look cute at first glance. But if, on that second glance, I see dingy blackheads, it's good night!"

Or can you blame the girl who confesses, "I hate to go out with a fellow who has blackheads. If he's careless about that you're sure he'll embarrass you in other ways, too!"

But you—are YOUR ears burning? Well, you've company and, sad to say, good company. There are lots of otherwise attractive fellows and girls who could date anyone they like if they'd only realize how offensive blackheads are . . . and how easily and quickly they could get rid of them . . . if they want to!

"He-Man" Often Guilty of Blackhead Crime

Take your "he-man" . . . super at track, games, sports of all kinds . . . who thinks that after just a shower he's ready to go anywhere! And won't the girls all admire his muscles!

Sure they would! But not many dance floors are set up for hurdle races! You can't show off your snappy left hook when only cokes are in the ring. The "he-man" who's also clean-cut, will get the breaks wherever he is.

Even Cute Girls Become Careless

Easy, too easy, for a girl to think that if she has the latest in clothes and hair-do she needn't bother about blackheads. A little more make-up, she guesses, will take care of that. BUT MAKE-UP WON'T HIDE BLACKHEADS! Not unless it's plaster of paris, maybe! And even good make-up "slips" at a dance! So don't take chances, cute though you may be!
